

Out of water, Argyroneta aquatica, the Eurasian water spider, is a drab, dun-colored little creature, barely half an inch in length.

Argyroneta spins a fine line of silk from her spinnerets and lowers herself headfirst into the water where she spends most of her life, from birth to death.