

PLATE 30

DISCUSSION: The small lot of 11 specimens of different age illustrates a tendency to variation in two directions. Some have the body whorl smooth with nodules hardly indicated, and in four specimens the nodules are prominent on the body whorl, forming a shoulder, and with a tendency to tabulation. The spiral sculpture, however, is a more constant feature, disappearing only on the top of nodules in a few specimens.

Kelletia vladimiri is easily distinct from any other species of